There is a series of new illustrations.

Never having been published, and only a small number of copies printed for private circulation, at a time when Egyptological students were few, these Excerpta are very rare and still retain their value as texts. Every copy that is found differs from nearly every other copy known, as a result of the way in which the author made up his plates at various intervals.

344 GARDINER (A. H.). Egyptian Grammar : Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphics. 4to., with 2 plates ; cloth Oxford, 1927	2	2	0
This Grammar addresses itself alike to the beginner and to the advanced student. In substance it is a systematic treatise on Egyptian syntax, but the needs of the learner are considered in the vocabularies and exercises. Close upon ten thousand references to original texts add to the value of the book as a work of reference. The sign-list treats the origin and uses of the individual hieroglyphs with a fullness never before attempted. A new hieroglyphic fount, based on originals in the Theban tombs, has been specially designed for the book by Mr. and Mrs. de Garis Davies.

	In his preface Sir Flinders Petrie explains that this volume is intended as a basis for an index, complete as far as possible, of motives used for decorative purposes. He considers that these motives can be better emphasised by being simplified than by being elaborated, as any irrelevant complication would tend to obscure the basic ideas. Accompanying each drawing are notes giving the date, the name of the place where each design was found, and the museum or book in which the author has discovered it.

MONOGRAPHS ON EGYPTIAN ARCHAEOLOGY

BASED ON FIELD WORK

THE collection of Egyptian antiquities at University College, London, was gathered by me in order to study the development of civilisation of the past ages of Egypt. The nucleus of the series was the small collection of a few antiquities given by Miss Edwards, who founded the professorship which I held. The opportunities of acquiring antiquities, when living in the country for forty years, were great, and many curious specimens, less saleable to the tourist, came my way. These purchased antiquities gained in value from comparison with the dated objects discovered in my excavations. From this there grew a view of serial development in primitive times and onwards. It eventually gave a basis for a series of monographs on different subjects, illustrated by my collection and in some instances augmented from other collections, thus forming a library of Egyptian archaeology.

My clear time has more or less sufficed to complete such " catalogues." I proposed to issue twenty-four volumes altogether. Twenty of these volumes were for the subjects which had to be worked up, and in addition there are four which are on subjects within the scope of other students. I might have issued more, if assistance had been provided, as much of my time in the preparation of them was occupied in the photographing and drawing of over 14,000 objects. Half of each year was swallowed in excavating and moreover a half-time post and pay, at the College, left no margin for keeping an assistant.

The following twenty Catalogue Volumes have been completed. The last four of the series can be delegated.

1. Amulets, the first catalogue, began the classifying of the subject in 275 kinds, with 1,700 photographs, and references to other collections. Constable issued it, but it was hit by the war so that no publishers will undertake such books. At the time, I was ordered to remain at the College, and that gave opportunity to prepare Catalogue Volumes, which could be issued annually to the subscribers of the British School of Egyptian Archaeology, while all excavations, and publication of results of field work, were suspended.

2. Scarabs with Names, and Cylinders was the most important of the volumes, historically. The 2,300 named scarabs of the collection form a more complete series than the British Museum series, and no other museum collection is of half the size.

3. Tools and Weapons contains 3,200 figures, of which 960 are photographs from the College. The absence of any corpus of forms before it was published has made this the standard book of reference for this subject. It is always quoted as " T.W." in Germany.

4. Prehistoric Egypt, with discussion of the dating of predynastic objects, has over 1,000 figures. The newly conceived " Sequence Dating " was put into practice, and applied to distinguish differences of age through the prehistoric periods.

5. Corpus of Prehistoric Pottery and Palettes. This embodied in 61 plates more than 1,700 different pots, arranged according to their form for easy reference, and dated by Sequence Dating.

6. Buttons and Design Scarabs is complementary to the previous volume on scarabs, completing the subject. It contains 2,200 figures, classified.

7. Ancient Weights and Measures records over 5,000 weights, with 1,000 figures and full discussion of the various standards, superseding the previous theories on the subject.

8. Glass Stamps and Weights, the companion volume to this, deals with the Byzantine and Arab periods, and records the most complete series known. It contains over 700 photographs with transcripts and translations.

9. Objects of Daily Use, with 62 photographic plates, contains 1,600 figures. The classes comprise jewellery, toilet articles, carvings, furniture and basketry, games and writing.

10. Shabtis contains 400 figures, with analysis of the text and copies, and a catalogue of Continental collections.

11. Funeral Furniture, the present volume, gives detailed descriptions of many classes of objects, with catalogue of 650 specimens.

12. Stone and Metal Vases follow in the same volume. Drawings are given of 1,300 vases of various dates, mostly early, with some photographs to show texture.

13. Corpus of Proto-dynastic Pottery, 30 plates with over 800 figures.

The last volume named is already completed for press and will soon be issued, making a total of thirteen Catalogues which will serve as text-books on the various subjects.

Besides these, I wrote seven more Catalogue Volumes :—

14. Glass and Glazes.
15. Textiles.
16. Stone and Plaster Work.
17. Coptic Objects.
18. Small Inscriptions.
19. Roman Terra Cotta Figures.
20. Small Figures, Glaze and Bronze,

but these volumes in manuscript have disappeared, in a clearance of College records which was made just before my return from Palestine in 1934.

There also remain to be prepared, by my successors, the Catalogues of :

21. Bead Necklaces, illustrating the unique collection of over 1,000 strings, ranging from Badarian (earliest prehistoric) down to Coptic Age. The representation of these in colour has been purposely postponed, awaiting a photographic process which will give a continuous colour, without white spotting.

22. Flint Implements.
23. Statuettes.
24. Inscriptions.

EGYPTIAN GRAMMAR

Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphics

By ALAN H. GARDINER

4to., pp. xxviii and 597, with 2 plates; cloth Oxford, 1927

Price £2. 2s.

This Grammar addresses itself alike to the beginner and to the advanced student. In substance it is a systematic treatise on Egyptian syntax, but the needs of the learner are considered in the vocabularies and exercises. Close upon ten thousand references to original texts add to the value of the book as a work of reference. The sign-list treats the origin and uses of the individual hieroglyphs with a fulness never before attempted.

A new hieroglyphic fount, based on originals in the Theban tombs, has been specially designed for the book by Mr. and Mrs. de Garis Davies.
